Investigation of CIA w where facts lead us:

F Post 1/27/75

NEW YORK (AP) — Vice Prsident Nelson A. Rockefeller said Sunday the investigation of domestic spying by the CIA is going to be pursued "wherever the facts lead us."

"We'll go as far as any action leads us, to a Republican president, to a Democratic president or anybody else," he told reporters as he left a CBS studio where he appeared on his first network television interview show since becoming vice president.

"We are there to get the facts, to get them out, to get them to the public and (to get) the reasons for whatever happened and then to make recommendations," he added.

"And we'll put the whole report out. We'll make a report to the President and we'll release it to the public."

Rockefeller was friendly and jovial with reporters who buttonholed him in the studio lobby.

But on the show "Face the Nation" he became angered when a reporter asked if he would "finger" anyone since "you had some sor CIA yourself State Kissing to."

Henry Ki National Se dealings with was a me Intelligence oversees it. I aide in the 196

The vice snapped: "

mels are being brought by ca om surrounding Arab countries f assive post-election feast in this ch Persian Gulf emirate.

Polling begins at sundown Monday
e 260 candidates running for 50 sea
e Kuwait parliament. When the vo
, the animals will be slaughte ooked and served.

Thousands of animals already h een killed to provide prospective vo vith feasts of rice and meat. Polit andidates paid for those meals i ampaign that one Kuwait newspa lubbed "sheep war games."

"It seems that the slogans emocracy or promises of reali opular demands taste more juicy ta efore or after camel meat," Kuwa aily Al Siyassah commented.

During the campaign, candida heir supporters and others gathe very night at dusk in neon-lit tent Persian carpets spread over the sa itter coffee and mint tea took the e ff the desert chill.

"It is the fourth election si

Probe of CIA

(Continued From Page A-1)

He noted he had just been the subject of an investigation himself after his nomination to be vice president, and said that there had been a lot of leaks.

However, he said Sen. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., and Sen. John O. Pastore, D-R.I., had both said a committee of 11 could conduct a secret investigation.

"I think they can if they are determined to do it," Rockelfeller said. "They had all the secrets of making the atom bomb and never leaked a thing."

When a reporter said his praise and unquestioning public support of Ford's policies showed "You are falling into the syndrome of "me-too'," Rockefeller again bristled.

His views, he said, "happen to coincide" with Ford's, and denied that he was concealing them.

Rockefeller reiterated his allout support for Ford's energy program.

He told reporters in the lobby Ford had shown "tremendous courage."

"No nibbling little program or bandaid is going to solve it," he said.

On the televised interview, he said that he would disagree publicly with Ford only on some "fundamental issue," and there had not been any such disagreement. Asked for an example of what he meant by "fundamental issue," he said he meant a "moral issue." He didn't explain further.

"I am expressing deep convictions that I hold," he said. "You have asked me my opinions, and I have voluntarily expressed them."

Rockefeller refused to say if he would seek the presidency if Ford doesn't run, or whether he would run for vice president with Ford.

He said the American people want the president and vice president to be "totally focused on the problems of today" and not on 1976 politics. He said running for president was "just not on my mind."

As for running for vice president with Ford, Rockefeller said: "If I said yes, then it might be taken that I was putting pressure on him to ask me.

"If he asks me, than I will give it consideration."